

Bistro to open on former hotel site

NICK WILLOUGHBY
@ncawilloughby

A SEVEN-day-a-week bistro and bar is set to open on the site of a former hotel in Haverhill.

The Nine Jars Bistro, which will take over the premises of the old Bell Hotel on the High Street, will serve cocktails and tapas-style food for up to 200 covers.

The venture has been launched by Haverhill lettings agency CXG Lettings, which is owned by brothers Daniel and Robin Pilley, and is expected to open before the end of the year.

Daniel Pilley said Nine Jars Bistro would bring something to the town "that you would only find normally in major cities, such as Cambridge, London and Nottingham".

"It's going to be the place to go for sophistication, where people can come and sit down and where people can enjoy small plates with good-quality drink," he said.

"You're going to be able to listen to background music, but enjoy socialising with your friends. There will be places to sit and eat at tables, as well as lounge areas to relax."

Mr Pilley, who has 20 years business experience in the town, said the new establishment would generate an estimated 10 to 15 jobs, and would compliment the six bedroom "boutique" hotel, which has been planned by CXG Lettings for the floor above.

NEW VENUE: Work is ongoing to transform the former Bell Hotel into Nine Jars Bistro

"Our vision is to create a bar where people can come and sit and socialise, which will give Haverhill an alternative to pubs where you have 300 people squeezed together," he added.

Mr Pilley's son James, who is involved in the project, said there would be a variety of food on offer during the day, such as paninis and sandwiches, as well as tapas-style food. There will also be a raft of cocktails and craft beer served in the evening.

He added: "It's not aimed at the 'get as drunk as you possibly can' kind of thing. It's going to be a much more relaxed atmosphere."

James, who has five years experience as a chef, said the premises had been left derelict since November 2013 after the Bell Hotel closed down.

The site had been granted planning permission in 2014 to be converted into 11 flats and a retail unit, but CXG wanted to return it to its former use as a hotel.

Renovation began shortly before Christmas, and since then, the building has been "completely gutted".

It is being refurbished to create an "industrial vintage feel".

"We have sanded the bar down and now we are putting it back gain," James said. "There will be exposed brickwork, Chesterfield sofas, Edison light bulbs - that sort of thing."

Town votes to leave the EU

A TOTAL of 56.6 per cent of voters in St Edmundsbury chose to leave the EU in last Thursday's referendum.

Haverhill UKIP town, borough and county councillor Tony Brown was at the count in Bury St Edmunds on Thursday night. He had campaigned for the country to leave the EU.

He said: "I'm looking forward to the future. I feel we have got our democracy back and now we can make decisions as a country moving forward."

"The great thing about it was the engagement, the huge number of people who turned out."

"It's all about working together for the future. I just see it as a great opportunity and possibility looking forward."

MP for West Suffolk Matthew Hancock, along with Suffolk's six other MPs, had campaigned for the country to remain in the European Union.

He said after the result was announced: "Having campaigned to Remain I am of course disappointed about the result, and sad that the Prime Minister has resigned after six years of steadfast leadership, in which the economy recovered, record jobs were created and the country strengthened."

"Now we must accept the result and come together. The British people have enormous ingenuity and capacity to build our future, and as your local MP and in Government it is my duty to play my part in doing that."

CELEBRATION

MILITARY PARADE: The Sea Cadets band leads the procession

Celebration of armed forces attracts crowds

NICK WILLOUGHBY

@ncawilloughby

HUNDREDS of spectators flocked to Haverhill High Street at the weekend to take part in a celebration of military pride.

National Armed Forces
Day, which took place on Saturday, was celebrated in Haverhill with a musical parade, the arrival of military vehicles and stalls exhibiting historical photos of local servicemen.

At 11am, the Bury St Ed-
Haverhill Arts Centre to lead a procession down the High Street, where market traders had set up stalls.

The "brilliant" musical band gathered in Market Square before three cadets carried out a flag-raising ceremony in front of the crowds.

Also in the square were plenty of stalls, military trucks and wartime memorabilia. A jive dance – reminiscent of the 1940s and 1950s – was performed by a local dance group.

Alan Bumpstead, of the Royal British Legion, which organised the event alongside Haverhill Town Council and the Haverhill Family History Group, said the day was a happy occasion designed to celebrate the armed forces.

He said: "I think the good thing about it was it brought together people of all ages, but in a totally informal and relaxing way. Most people were out shopping and happened to come to view the event, but it was an attraction in the middle of town."

He added that despite the showers, hundreds of people attended.

The Haverhill Family History Group asked people to donate photos of servicemen ahead of the event. The group subsequently created posters featuring military photos of local people from as far back as the Boer War to the present day.

The posters will be available for viewing over the next few months at Haverhill Arts Centre.

'Biblical' storms cause flood misery for families

FLOODED OUT: Helen Frame and husband Andy with their children, Oliver, 2, and George, 4 months. Above, flooding in Withersfield and left, in Thurlow

@HannahMirskyCN

FAMILIES were forced out of their homes by flooding at the weekend as "biblical" storms battered the Haverhill area.

Flood alerts were in force from Saturday night to Monday morning for the River Stour from Kedington to Sudbury, and on Saturday night for the Stour Brook in Haverhill itself.

In Withersfield, residents reported that three homes were flooded and cars were left half submerged.

The owner of Bradman's pub in the village, Lee D'Arcy-Jones, said: "It was horrendous. There were about three or four houses flooded."

"It affected us as a business because the road was cut off in three different directions."

A bride who was getting married at St Mary the Virgin Church in Withersfield said she "wasn't as happy as I should have been" as the flooding made getting to the church an ordeal.

Tina Kimble, who lives in Haverhill's Parkside, said: "We all looked like drowned rats as we walked down the aisle."

She said that the wedding party had trouble getting to the reception in Castle Camps because of flooding and when they arrived they were "sitting in puddles" because the reception was in a marquee.

However, a kind stranger who saw her struggling in her wedding dress in the rain reached out via social media to offer her the gift of a disco and a bouncy castle to make up for the washed-out wedding day.

"I was sitting in Wimpy and it almost made me cry," she said. "I couldn't believe they were being so generous."

Flooding was also reported on other roads in the Haverhill area, including the A1307 and on the B1061 from Haverhill to Thurlow, where one driver estimated the water was 2ft deep.

In the South Cambridgeshire village of Weston Colville, a family with a four-month-old baby were forced out of their home on Saturday as 3ft of water came flooding into their house.

Helen Frame, 35, said: "I've literally never seen anything like that in my life," she said. "It couldn't have come down any faster. It was biblical."

She said the damage had been so severe that she, her husband and their two sons would not be able to return to the house in the village's Chapel Road for two months.

But she added: "At the end of the day, it is replaceable. Family is the most important thing."

She said a "hero" neighbour had attached a cord to her belt to help pull them out of their home against the current, and had given the family – including sons Oliver, 2, and George, four months – a place to sleep for the night.

Mrs Frame continued: "It was a little bit like white water rafting – it was a proper river, up to our waists as we came out."

She and her husband Andrew, 36, had tried to put belongings upstairs and take what they needed to look after the children.

She said: "It was traumatic for the boys – Oliver was terrified. We just had to put them upstairs because we were trying to salvage things. He said to me this morning: 'Is our house still full of water?'"

She said that there had been no flooding in the village "in anybody's living memory".

An Environment Agency rain gauge at Fleam Dyke in South Cambridgeshire reported that more than 15mm of rain fell in the space of just one hour on Saturday afternoon.

Wheelie bins block way to town for blind man

NICK WILLOUGHBY

@ncawilloughby

A PARTIALLY-sighted man who uses a guide dog has complained that wheelie bins left in the middle of the pavement prevent him from walking across town.

Simon Edwards, who is registered as blind, said the problem occurred when binmen emptied the bins and put them back on the pavement haphazardly, creating obstacles for partially-sighted people, wheelchair users, and those with buggies.

The 42-year-old man lives at Lavender Field with his guide dog Parsley. On trips into town, the golden retriever leads him along the pavement, but often encounters problems with the bins – particularly at the Strawberry Field estate and Parkway Estate.

"[The binmen] put them back in any old place because they have to get on with their job. I'm sure the council will say that the binmen don't have time, but they should make time."

When three-year-old Parsley cannot navigate a route because of an

CHALLENGED: Simon Edwards, who is registered blind, and Katie Donno, who is a wheelchair user, both have difficulty negotiating wheelie bins left on the pavements obstacle, he usually backtracks and tries to go around it. But this has led to some potentially dangerous situations. "There are a number of times when I have had to walk on the road and nearly been hit by a car," he said.

He said the worst day was on Wednesday, where two bins are picked up and dropped off in some parts of the town. "On Wednesday, each house has two bins out, and you can imagine how many are out on the footpath. On those days I won't go down to town because it makes my life and absolute nightmare."

Haverhill resident Katie Donno, 17, said she has similar issues as a wheelchair user.

"When going down the High Street, you either have to dodge the bins or dodge the potholes," she said.

"Things do become a real struggle when you're by yourself and you have to wheel around them. Sometimes the pavements aren't big enough for me and the bins. It's like an assault course."

She said a good solution would be to "leave them by the side of the road or even in the drive – just so there's enough room for a wheelchair, because it's just not fair."

A Haverhill Town Council spokesman told the News: "Thanks for bringing this to our attention. We will speak to our crews to try to prevent this from happening again."

TRANSPORT

Chamber wants to see third exit

TRANSPORT plans for the 2,500-home Great Wilsey development are in danger of ignoring the needs of Haverhill businesses to cater for those in Cambridge.

That is the view of Haverhill's Chamber of Commerce which said in a statement it had "serious worries" over current plans to rule out a third exit point.

The chamber said: "We are very concerned that the transport assessment has not included our request for a third exit near the Haverhill Golf Club, which was in the original plan."

"In our opinion, this third exit will help traffic flow to our main industrial estate," it added.

"The homes are not exclusively for people working in Cambridge," the chamber said, "and many people who work in the town are likely to live in them."

"We urge all three councils – town, borough and county – to look at Haverhill for what it has to offer within the town, rather than focus purely on how to accommodate traffic to Cambridge. When looking at pushing traffic on to the A1307 in the next five years, the new bypass will certainly get the traffic out of Haverhill, but how does it then travel towards Cambridge and beyond?"

MUSIC

Band are hoping their new album signals success

NEW RELEASES: Dale Bennett with his band, The Incidentals

A MUSICIAN who formed his own band just a year ago is set to release an album this summer.

Dale Bennett, 24, will be releasing the album Signals on August 13, with his band Dale Bennett and The Incidentals.

Dale, who lives in Haverhill, said he has been interested in music since he was a child.

He said: "My dad loves music. I kind of grew up with it and listened to the stuff he likes, sang along to the tunes. I did a talent contest when I was 8 years old and people told me I was really good – so I carried on."

After launching his career as a solo singer-songwriter, he formed Dale Bennett and The Incidentals less than a year ago.

The band's current line-up, with Alex Coombes and Michael Pulman on guitar, Luke Andrews on drums and Jack Sunaway on bass, has been going just three months.

Dale said: "I kind of just got fed up with going out with me and my acoustic guitar. When I write the music I normally end up getting session musicians for the recording. Now when we gig we can play the songs as they were meant to be heard."

HANNAH MIRSKY

He said forming a band had been good news for the music's popularity: "Since we got the band together it's got really, really busy."

In the last two months the band has supported American country-inspired singer Nell Bryden and hit 80s duo Go West at the Apex in Bury St Edmunds.

Dale Bennett and The Incidentals are set to be releasing a single from the new album, entitled Just a Little, on July 16, alongside a music video, partly filmed when the band appeared at Suffolk's Homegrown festival.

Dale described Just a Little as "a really poppy upbeat kind of song, which seems to go down pretty well".

It is one of nine songs, all penned by Dale, to feature on the new album.

He said: "I would say that overall it's quite a feelgood album, but there are a couple of songs that might make you want to cry. A lot of them are kind of like happy-go-lucky love songs."

"The girlfriend I'm with now, I went through a bad patch with her, and it's kind of about that. It's quite personal."

The band has organised a launch party which is open to the public for the new album on August 12.

The party is set to take place at Haverhill's New Croft in Chalkstone Way, from 7.30pm onwards, and will feature performances from Bury St Edmunds guitarist Alton Wahlberg, and Cambridge band Bearded Grey, before Dale and his band round off the night.

Just a Little will be available on iTunes, Amazon and Spotify from July 16, and Signals will be available from August 13. Search "Dale Bennett Music" on Facebook and @DBIncidentals on Twitter.

Our world is in safe hands

THE age of chivalry is alive and well in Haverhill.

My car had been playing up and making unusual noises, so on Friday I booked it in to my very reliable Ellis garage for repair on Monday, June 6. However, on the evening of June 4, I was returning home about 8pm. Three minutes from home there was a horrendous noise, so I put my hazard lights on and continued on home.

Just as I parked my car, I noticed a car with two young men coming towards me. They stopped and enquired if I had a spare wheel and a jack and they would change my very flat tyre. Wow – I just couldn't believe my luck. Apparently, they were travelling in the opposite direction and when they saw my predicament – my very flat tyre – they immediately turned their car round and followed me home to offer their help.

They changed my wheel in a few minutes and when I offered them some money they refused it quite blankly, it was just kindness, being neighbourly, a good deed.

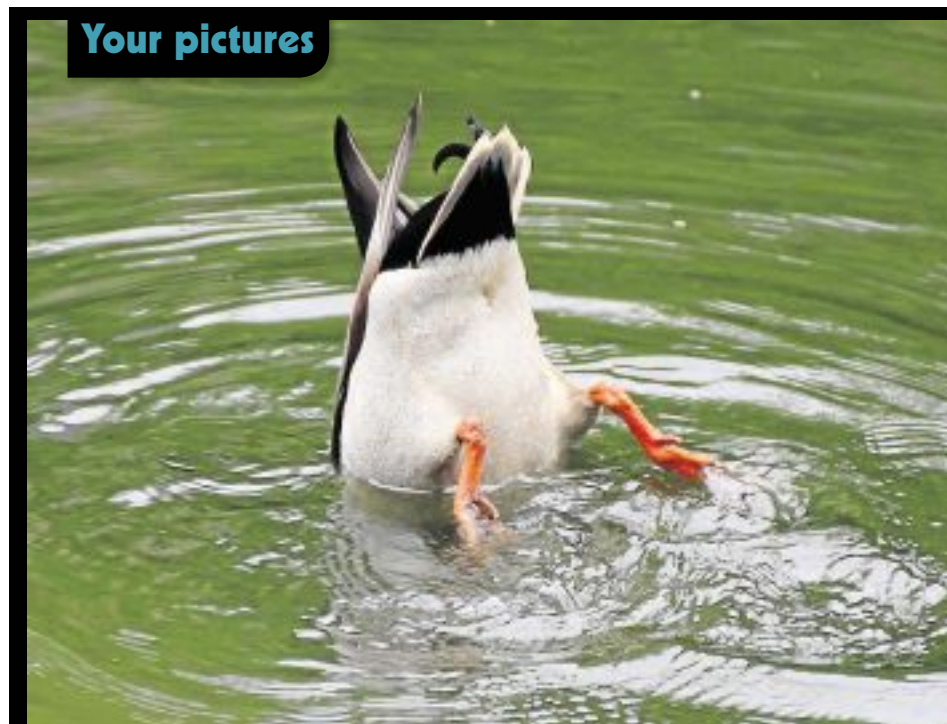

If this is indicative of today's youth, our world must surely be in good hands. What truly marvellous young men. They live near Domino's and their names are Ben and Chris, probably live in Appleacre Road or thereabouts. If anyone knows them, please show them this thank you letter.

From a very grateful OAP.

Help on offer over job fears

WHILE it is promising that UK unemployment has fallen, we know it's not all good news, as research by Citizens Advice this week highlights the extent of insecure employment and the financial challenges it presents.

■ We love to see your pictures. Send them in JPEG format marked 'Your Pictures' to wendy.davey@cambridge-news.co.uk. Please add your name, address and daytime telephone number, where you took the photo and, if possible, a picture of yourself! We reserve the right to reuse pictures at our discretion.

A total of 4.5 million people in England and Wales are now in insecure work, including temporary contracts, variable shifts and zero-hour contracts. A lack of regular hours and guaranteed pay can cause huge uncertainty and stress, as workers may not know from week to week if they will be able to cover their bills or rent, or put food on the table for their families.

As a charity helping people in financial hardship, this echoes what we regularly hear. Thirty-nine per cent of low income workers told us their outgoings outweighed their earnings, and 57 per cent would like to work more hours but cannot get the work. In addition, 87 per cent of all low income households have seen no improvement to their financial situation within the last year.

Accessing welfare support can also be a challenge for those with fluctuating hours and pay. Therefore, we urge anyone who is struggling financially to use our free Benefits Calculator at Turn2us.org.uk to check what help could be available. It also includes a 'better-off' function to show how a change in hours or wages could affect benefits entitlements and overall household income.

While more needs to be done to tackle insecure employment in the long term, we hope that we can help more people to find the support they need now, which could make all the difference in easing some of the pressures they face.

Women enjoy charity walk

HAVERHILL fundraisers devised their own impromptu walk when the charity Run Race for Life was cancelled on Sunday.

Dozens of women working at the town branch of Tesco were on their way to Bury to take part in the Cancer Research UK (CRUK) event when they learned it had been rained off.

Instead of giving up, the group enjoyed a 5km walk around East Town Park, in the process raising around £400 for charity.

Tesco community champion Claire Bowden said: "I didn't want people feeling a bit down, and everybody planned to be out for the day.

"On the walk it was very upbeat, and everyone was chatting, and laughing, and the kids were running around keeping everyone going."

CRUK is sponsored by Tesco.

Paths 'riddled with potholes' says woman in wheelchair

HANNAH MIRSKY

@HannahMirskyCN

A WHEELCHAIR user says she has been left unable to leave her home due to the terrible state of footpaths near her house.

Grandmother-of-four Denise Griffin lives in Fastnet Close, off Shetland Road, on Haverhill's Wilsey Estate.

The 60-year-old woman described the footpaths on the estate as riddled with dangerous potholes which make using them difficult not just for her, but for mothers with pushchairs.

Mrs Griffin, who is suffering from bone cancer, started using a wheelchair in January. She said she had tried to go out with her carer recently but: "I was - number one - exhausted and number two, I felt like I had been shaken from head to toe."

She said that it was difficult even to get to the bus stop.

"It stops me completely from going out unless I go by four wheels," she said.

Mrs Griffin added that her 4-year-old grandson was trying to learn how to ride a bicycle, but wasn't able to because of the state of the paths.

She said: "Everybody's talking about how they can't take their children out to learn how to ride a bike because there are so many holes."

The grandmother said her daughter-in-law, who also lives on the Wilsey Estate, had contacted Suffolk Highways about the issue three weeks ago, and Mrs Griffin herself had contacted them about it on June 22. She said they had both been told repairing the potholes was not a priority.

A spokesperson for Suffolk Highways said: "We appreciate Mrs Griffin's situation and we were very prompt to respond to her letter last week. We appreciate that there's a scope of work to do here in time.

"However, we have to manage our priorities across the highways in Haverhill and will try to do it in a timely fashion."

Priest to face retrial over fraud charge

A CLERGYMAN is to face a retrial over allegations that he defrauded his own church.

Last November, a jury at Ipswich Crown Court failed to reach a verdict after hearing evidence in the case of the Rev Ian Finn.

On Monday, it was decided that a retrial would take place in early January next year and was expected to last for up to six days.

The Rev Finn, 57, who is Rector of St Mary the Virgin in Haverhill, has been accused of fraud by abuse of position in respect of undeclared fees for funerals and the reading of wedding banns.

The offence is alleged to have been committed between June, 2007, and March, 2014, at Haverhill.

Judge David Goodin told the Rev Finn, of Hopton Rise, Haverhill, who is also Rural Dean of Clare and an Honorary Canon of St Edmundsbury Cathedral, that he would continue to be granted bail until his next court appearance.

Hacking charge man 'in danger'

RAYMOND BROWN

Crime reporter
@RaymondBrownCN

THE vicar father of an autistic man from Suffolk accused of hacking into US government computers warned there was a "high probability" that his son would kill himself if he was extradited to the US.

Lauri Love, who lives at Stradishall and has Asperger's, is accused of stealing huge amounts of data from US agencies, including the Federal Reserve, the Department of Defence, Nasa and the FBI.

American authorities want the 31-year-old, who lives with his parents, to stand trial there over charges of cyber-hacking, which his lawyers say could lead to him spending up to 99 years in prison if found guilty.

But his parents told an extradition hearing at Westminster Magistrates' Court their "exceptionally gifted" son had a long history of severe mental health and physical illnesses.

His mental health, combined with the deep stress of separation while waiting for trial and during a possible jail sentence, would be "highly likely" to result in his suicide, they said.

The Rev Alexander Love, a prison chaplain who himself works with vulnerable people at risk of suicide, told the court that those he helps often see killing themselves as their only solution to a future they cannot see.

He said: "In regard to my son . . . Lauri is somebody who strikes me as somebody who will do this. The probability is quite high."

Mr Love said the "bitter experience" of leading funerals for people who had killed themselves led to the regret that everyone has, "that they didn't see it coming".

The court heard that his son, an electrical engineering student, is accused of working with others to carry out a series of sophisticated cyber attacks on computer networks in the US from the UK, breaking in via the "back door" to access personal information of thousands of government staff, as well as credit card details.

But his lawyer Ben Cooper said there was a "real risk" that the slim chance of bail in the US while awaiting trial, the possibility of being incarcerated in solitary confinement and being separated from his parents – whose care and presence is "fundamental" to his mental stability – means there is a "real risk of mental breakdown".

The hearing continues.

Councillors from three counties meet

A RANGE of issues were discussed at a groundbreaking new meeting attended on Monday by councillors from Suffolk, Cambridgeshire and Essex.

The first ever Haverhill Area Forum meeting saw more than 30 delegates from parishes close to Haverhill – spanning the three counties – gather in the town to debate crucial local issues such as the A1307 and healthcare.

Cllr John Batchelor, who represents Linton at South Cambridgeshire District Council, said: "It was a 'getting to know you' meeting really. I think it went fine. There were a lot of different strains to it, so I think in the next one we will focus on one or two issues rather than a scatter-gun approach."

"Those of us who sit on the A1307 have always had complaints about Haverhill developments, so that was certainly an issue that we wanted to raise."

"Considering that, there hasn't been one pound spent on infrastructure over the border in Cambridgeshire. The City Deal money proposes changes, but even that money doesn't seem to go very far."

He said the initiative had been launched to raise greater awareness of local problems. "It's a matter of seeing if we can speak with one voice or not, because others at a district and county council level will make the decisions."

Another issue councillors discussed was the tendency of Haverhill residents to use doctors' surgeries outside the town.

Haverhill town councillor Maureen Byrne told the News: "We have a crisis in Suffolk as far as GP availability is concerned."

"I think it's accepted that it's very difficult to get doctors to come and work and live in Haverhill."

She said that because the three counties were in the same NHS region, Haverhill residents were alleviating the issue by utilising services elsewhere, putting pressure on them.

HEALTH

Support on hand at Parkinson's group

A SUPPORT group for people with Parkinson's in Haverhill is thriving – and wants to reach out to new members.

Sheila Johnson, who lives in the town, set up the group about a year ago with her friend Susie Knight and after relocating twice, she is hoping their new venue in the Burton Centre, Camps Road, will be their last move.

Since the group formed, it has grown from about 12 members to between 20 and 24 who include carers as well as those with Parkinson's.

The group is now affiliated with charity Parkinson's UK.

Parkinson's disease is a condition in which parts of the brain become progressively damaged over many years.

The main symptoms are involuntary shaking of particular parts of the body, slow movement and stiff and inflexible muscles.

Most people with Parkinson's start to develop symptoms when they're over 50, but around one in 20 people with the condition first experience symptoms when they're under 40.

Although there is currently no cure, treatments are available to help reduce the main symptoms and maintain quality of life for as long as possible.

FREYA LENG

Sheila, a former telesales worker, has had Parkinson's for the 17 years after being diagnosed just before her 40th birthday. The 56-year-old first noticed something was not right when she started experiencing cramping in her feet.

"I was walking home from work like I did every day and my toes in my left foot would cramp," she said. "I put up with it for about a year then my hand would lock and I found I couldn't write properly and I started trembling as well by that stage."

Doctors did not diagnose the disease at first as Sheila's symptoms did not happen all the time and initially it was thought she had suffered a stroke.

But after having all sorts of tests a neurologist finally diagnosed her with the disease a year-and-a-half later.

"I was relieved as I thought by then I had a brain tumour," she said. "The symptoms and the pain were so bad in my arm I could hardly move it."

"When they got me on the medication it freed my limbs up then I was able to move better. I'm quite lucky with the tremors. They are not so bad, the worst thing for me is the cramping of my left leg. I have difficulty walking distances now."

Sheila said she wanted to dispel the myth that all "we do is sit and shake".

"Whenever you say Parkinson's, people just think it's an old person's illness and they just sit there and shake," she said. "It's not the case. Some people tremor, some people freeze up when they try to walk. That's why there's so many problems with diagnosis."

And for the people who do come to the support group, it is a chance to socialise as well as get help.

"Some of the people that come along live on their own. One of our members until he met us didn't know what [help] was available. He didn't know he could see a neurologist," added Sheila. "We have games and guest speakers so anyone with Parkinson's or not are always welcome."

The support group meets every second Wednesday of the month from 2-4pm. Anyone is welcome to go along to a meeting with the first one taking place in its new venue on July 13.

Glasswells celebrates 70th

AS we continue to celebrate furniture store Glasswells' 70th anniversary, we've been looking at how the company has changed and evolved over the years. In this latest instalment we look at how things progressed in the 1950s.

In 1952, a leap forward was made when the opportunity to gain additional storage space in St Andrews Street South became available. The property, an old coach house with earth floors, was just around the corner to the Brentgovel Street shop and belonged to the same landlords. The lease was successfully negotiated and was eventually extended to include two attached cottages.

"It wasn't long before we thought of adding a shop front," recalls Leslie Glasswell. Local builder, Harvey Frost, was engaged to draw up plans for a single-storey shop extension at an estimated cost of £5,000. The final result, however, was a two-storey shop costing double the estimate at £10,000.

The new building, their biggest to date, was opened by the Mayor of Bury in October 1954. The Bury Free Press carried their first full-page advertisement since the war, which proclaimed "the first completely new building to be erected by a local-born trader for over 50 years".

Even in the 1950s, traffic congestion was becoming a problem in Bury. Furthermore, as Glasswells expanded, the more evident it became that servicing shops and customers from warehouses scattered about the town was highly labour intensive. More important still was the fact that supplies from manufacturers needed to be ordered in quantity to qualify for a discount and, to maintain store displays, sold products needed to be replaced immediately from stock.

The answer to the problem was to build a central warehouse, large enough to take care of all the firm's distribution and storage needs. It happened that Jerry Glasswell owned a piece of building land near the Tollgate Inn in Fornham Road. It had cost just £300 in 1951 and although originally intended for a house for Leslie's family, the 1.1 acre site was large enough for a big warehouse and was easily accessible. The family decided unanimously: business must come first.

Work began on a 10,000 sq.ft warehouse in 1955, however the steady growth of business at the time is illustrated by the fact that within 18 months of completion it became necessary to extend it by a further 5,000 sq.ft. In fact further additions were made until the mid 1960s when storage space reached a maximum 30,000 sq.ft.

Leslie Glasswell recalls: "The Tollgate warehouse was the jewel in our crown. We were able to store customers' purchases until they needed them, as well as maintain good stocks of furniture ready for quicker delivery of orders".

Just as the first bricks were being laid at the new warehouse in 1955, along came the chance of a prime site in Bury town centre. A well-known local firm, Barclay Motors, decided to move elsewhere in the town, vacating its car showroom in part of the Corn Exchange in the heart of the town. It had long windows facing the Traverse and the lease came on the market for £1,000 – the perfect spot for a furnishing store.

At a stroke, Glasswells acquired what was one of the biggest window display spaces in East Anglia, opening in 1957. To make the most of the position, a leading West End designer was engaged to create a series of display rooms – right next door to the hall that had housed some of Glasswells' biggest exhibitions.

They now had three shops in Bury, each serving different markets: the Corn Exchange took the highest quality stock, the St Andrew's shop dealt with medium range, and the lower end of the market was concentrated in Brentgovel Street.

They became an integral part of the local community and introduced their famous Christmas tea and sugar distribution to local pensioners for many years.

New show building up steam

HANNAH MIRSKY
@HannahMirskyCN

AROUND 2,000 people are expected to descend on a village outside Haverhill next month for a new event.

The first Kedington Steam and Vintage Show is set to feature up to 60 vintage steam engines, tractors, cars, stationary engines and more.

The family event is set to include children's rides and stalls selling items ranging from vintage steam vehicle equipment to arts and crafts.

There also will be a fully licensed bar.

The event is being run by the Kedington Community Association, which is responsible for the upkeep of the Kedington Community Centre and the village's Great Meadow.

Organiser Matt Garwood said: "We thought it would be great to have a specialist weekend for vintage vehicles, a family weekend."

Mr Garwood – who himself owns a steam roller – said that a similar event he had organised in Saffron Walden recently had attracted 4,000 visitors.

He said that he hoped the Kedington rally would become an annual event, provided it was successful.

He said: "It's shaping up to be a good fun weekend for the village and the local area."

Although Haverhill hosts a vintage vehicle rally – this year set to take place on Sunday, July 10 – there has not been a steam rally in the area for around four years, when a similar event at Thurlow stopped taking place around.

Mr Garwood said: "The talk within the historic movement is very, very positive, and the communication we have had within the village and the local area is very, very positive."

The rally, on July 30 and 31 on the Great Meadow, in Arms Lane, Kedington, will be free to attend, but donations will be encouraged, as all proceeds go towards the community association.

Keith Light was just 33 when he died of skin cancer, leaving behind his wife Laura and son, Peter. Now Laura, originally from Haverhill, is on a mission to spread the word about sun safety. She tells Emma Higginbotham her story.

It was a mouse – a small dead mouse on the doorstep – that finally led 3-year-old Peter to realise what had happened to his daddy.

"I was very honest right from the start," says Laura Light, recalling her attempts to tell her little boy that he wouldn't ever see his father, Keith, again. "I said to him that Daddy had slept quite a lot because his body was broken, and that he'd died. But I think most adults can't comprehend dying, let alone children, and he just didn't get it.

"It's taken a dead mouse on the doorstep for him to understand what death is. I said that the mouse is now playing with Daddy in heaven – and he knows someone whose mum died, and he asked if the mouse was playing with her too. So it's taken months, but he understands it more now."

Keith was just 33 when melanoma, the most dangerous form of skin cancer, claimed his life in April 2015. For Laura and Peter, who turned 4 earlier this week, it's been a rollercoaster of a year. "But I see Keith in Peter every day; his smile, his energy, his mischievousness," she says. "He's very much his dad, and that's a comfort."

Laura was 22 and had just finished at university when she first met Keith at her local in Haverhill. "His family owned the pub, and as soon as I saw him I just thought he was really nice: very loud, very outgoing – exactly what I needed. I was kind of put off by the fact that he was four years younger than me," she admits with a grin, "but we made friends and got to know each other, and took it from there."

After moving to London for seven years, in 2008 the couple bought a cottage in Lilington, near Royston, that needed a bit of work. A year later they got married.

"It was a really great day," says the 38-year-old, picking up a framed wedding photo that shows Keith, in heart-shaped dark glasses, giving a victory sign to the camera. "That completely sums him up: just always smiling, always with that grin. When people talk to me about what they remember about him, it's that he was fun. He was explosive – lots of energy, always doing something, never sitting still."

The couple were over the moon when Laura fell pregnant, with their baby expected in July 2012. But not long before her due date, it all began to go wrong.

"I came back one evening and Keith had had a really severe nosebleed, and he was quite freaked out by it," recalls Laura. "So it was just by chance that he went to the doctor about the nosebleed, and the doctor said 'Is there anything else?'"

There was. A couple of months earlier, Laura had spotted something odd about a mole on Keith's back. "It was very dark, and it had started getting lumpy," she says. "He'd never really gone out in the sun – he was fair-skinned, with strawberry blond hair – but I said 'You need to get that checked'."

The doctor agreed, and arranged for Keith to have a biopsy, "but we weren't worried. We were more focused on the baby and getting the house finished."

Soon after, a heavily-pregnant Laura went into Addenbrooke's to have a 36-week scan. At exactly the same time, Keith went to get the results of his biopsy. "Then he came back as I was just having my blood tested – and I saw a Macmillan leaflet in his hand."

She pauses and shakes her head. "The lady couldn't get any blood out because my veins must have shrunk from the shock. It was surreal. He couldn't say anything to me, because there was someone there, and then we went down in the lift and he said 'Yeah, it's melanoma'."

Keith was booked in for an operation to remove the mole; meanwhile Laura went into labour two weeks early ("I think because of the stress of it"). Yet in spite of all the worry, Peter's birth was, says Laura, "perfect. I had a water birth, and Keith picked him up out of the water, so it was very special."

But just four days later, Keith had to return to Addenbrooke's for his surgery. And, once doctors started operating, they realised that his condition was more serious than they'd hoped: the melanoma had spread to his lymph nodes.

A fortnight later, Keith had a further operation to remove the lymph nodes down one side, and took three months' sick leave.

"And we decided, because I was the main earner, that I would have four months' maternity leave, and then Keith would have paternal leave and look after Peter."

As bad luck would have it, both were made redundant the following year. Laura, a product designer, found another job, and in August 2013 Keith decided to set up his own business.

"He was a grafter. He wanted to provide for his family, so he set up Light & Son, which was house and garden maintenance. He did anything and everything, and built it up by word-of-mouth. He loved it, because it meant he could do the nursery run with Peter."

For a year, Keith felt fine, and the couple decided to move house. "He was getting fed up of having to go for three-month check-ups because he didn't think there was anything wrong with him," recalls Laura. "But then in September 2014 we'd gone on holiday to France, and he seemed really tired. I put that down to his job, and us trying to get the house ready to sell. But he'd got a couple of lesions on his head, and to me they just looked . . . different."

She was right. The lesions were signs of an external tumour; Keith went to have a scan, "and they found out it had gone everywhere. It was in his lungs, his liver, his head, everywhere. His consultant came in and shut the door, and he told us the news. He basically said 'It's untreatable.' It was devastating, just surreal."

"But Keith had a very positive mind-set. He said 'I'm going to live to see my boy grow up'. That was his motivation right up until the end."

Because of the advanced stage of his cancer, chemotherapy wasn't offered. Instead, Keith began a series of trial drugs, "and we had six months to try and do everything we possibly could. We went to Barcelona, we went to the Lakes, he bought himself an old Mini . . . You don't think about the future, because you're literally living week to week. But you do hope for a miracle."

By March last year, more tumours had appeared, and Keith, Laura and Peter headed off to California for a final holiday together.

More scans the day after they came home revealed the worst possible news. "They basically said 'It's not working'," recalls Laura. "It wasn't a surprise, because he'd started getting pains in his chest and head. That was when we went to palliative care – and obviously that's devastating."

"But he took enough painkillers to go and see all of his friends, and that weekend, he went clay pigeon shooting with his mates and beat them all," says Laura with a wry laugh. "It's just typical him. And he'd been made chair of Royston Round Table, so he chaired his first and last meeting. He came back and you could tell it had taken so much out of him, but he just did it because that was his job. Then he just got worse and worse. Every time he moved he was sick, so I called the ambulance and he was taken to hospital."

Keith went in on the Tuesday, and he died the following day.

For Laura, who'd expected she'd have weeks rather than days left with her husband, it was a terrible shock. "He just went so quickly. And obviously for Peter it was very strange; he'd gone to nursery two days before and kissed him goodbye, and then he didn't see him again. So it was very confusing for him. We have memory books, we talk about him and he looks at his photos, but it's been a tough year."

Inevitably, certain times are more difficult than others for Laura. "The days are fine; I can focus on work, but I find the weekends hard, especially Friday and Saturday nights, when you're generally at home with your family. But we're always visiting people. I've found a new normal, I guess."

Laura has also poured her energy into fundraising for Skcin (the Karen Clifford skin cancer charity), so far raising an astonishing £10,300 through her Just Giving page. "I'm doing what I can," she says. "The charity is about awareness and education, because I don't feel the awareness is there. Sunburn is seen as comical; people don't realise the risk. And skin cancer is preventable!"

"It's all about being safe in the sun, wearing sun cream, wearing sun hats, being aware of the UV levels. Especially for men. And this is the mind-set that Keith had – that he would be OK, that it would happen to someone else."

"If you're concerned about a mole, if you have something on your body that you're not sure about, get it checked out," she concludes firmly.

"I'm determined to make new memories with Peter – and to prevent other people going through what we've been through. If you feel that you can make a difference, you will."

July Festival 2016

MORE than 30,000 people are set to descend on Newmarket next week as the July Festival launches for 2016.

As some of the finest thoroughbreds from around the world compete for victory on the racecourse, there is also plenty to see and do around the course.

The festival kicks off next Thursday, July 7, with the historic Newmarket Town Plate – the oldest race in the world – officially marking the start of the festival at 1pm.

West Suffolk MP Matthew Hancock will be in the saddle for the race, and in honour of the special 350th anniversary year, the winning rider will be awarded a specially commissioned copy of the King Charles II Challenge Whip, created by Spink Auction House. Other prizes the winning amateur will take home include a voucher for Goldings and the traditional box of Powters Newmarket sausages, alongside a silver photo frame and a Perpetual Challenge Plate.

Women should don their best attire on Thursday too, as July 7 marks Ladies Day, while Friday is Gentleman's Day.

Bring your partner on Saturday for the Best Dressed Couple competition, with the best dressed lady, man and couple crowned via the Style Awards each day.

And after racing, Heart FM and The Only

Way Is Essex's Mark Wright will be DJing on Thursday, whilst blogger and TV personality Vogue Williams will take to the decks on Friday.

Newmarket Monopoly, a special anniversary edition of the game featuring stakeholders and trainers within Newmarket, will also be on sale over the festival.

East Anglia's Children's Hospices (Each) has been confirmed as the official charity of the July Festival.

Get your tickets for the July Festival by going to newmarketracecourses.com.

■ Thursday, June 30 – Friday, July 8
■ Edinburgh Fringe previews are always popular, tomorrow at 8pm it is the turn of Andrew Maxwell, who you may have heard on Radio 4 and all those Apollo Live-type shows, as well as cheeky chappy Larry Dean, Scottish Comedian of The Year and Best Newcomer at the Edinburgh Comedy Awards in 2015. Please note the line-up is subject to change.
■ It's the return of the annual Street Festival this weekend. On Saturday look out as you do your shopping on the High Street and Queen Street as there will be a few strangers in town! There will be an eccentric Victorian gentleman pedalling along on a penny farthing, an inquisitive (and oversized) pigeon couple, a flamboyant pair of ballroom dancers with a toxic orange tan and a rather unconventional line in the Cha Cha Cha, plus lots more. The Street Festival coincides with St Edmundsbury Borough Council's Beer and Music Festival (which takes place on Saturday and Sunday in the Market Square) so you can feast your eyes on the street festival, your ears on the music and your taste buds on the amber liquid on offer!

Royston is global hub for development of fuel cells

JOHNSON Matthey, the leading UK headquartered speciality chemicals company, has been developing and supplying state-of-the-art membrane electrode assemblies (MEAs) that are a key component of an automotive fuel cell.

The Royston-based firm will lead a major European consortium to develop higher performance, longer lifetime MEAs for integration into new, high power output fuel cell stack technology. Johnson Matthey will work in close collaboration with its industrial and academic partners to bring forward materials and components already showing considerable promise in current FCH JU projects, integrate them for enhanced performance and demonstrate their capability to be manufactured in volume.

Major European fuel cell component developers SGL Carbon GmbH will work on the carbon fibre gas diffusion layer part of the MEA; and DANA Holding Corp. will be developing an optimised design of metallic bipolar plate that delivers the hydrogen and air to the MEA and transmits the electricity generated to power the vehicle. BMW Group will set out the requirements for the stack and assemble the MEAs and bipolar plates into new stack designs aimed at achieving the cost, durability and volumetric power density targets required for mass market exploitation.

Johnson Matthey is a major global supplier of platinum-based catalyst layers, catalysed membranes and fully-integrated MEAs. The MEA is the most critical component of automotive fuel cells, influencing their power output, efficiency, lifetime and cost.

As well as realising the potential of advanced stack materials and components and validating them in the next generation of automotive fuel cell stacks, the project will consolidate a European supply chain for these critical fuel cell stack components and increase the competitiveness of the European fuel cell industry on the world stage.

Dr Jane Butcher, managing director of Johnson Matthey's Fuel Cells business, said: "Fuel cell powered vehicles are anticipated to be a major application for MEA technology from the mid-2020s and beyond that will meet a growing consumer demand for full performance capable driving with zero tail-pipe emissions.

"Johnson Matthey is delighted to receive this award from Europe's Fuel Cells and Hydrogen Joint Undertaking, enabling it to work with such a high calibre team of partners to advance the critical technology and products that will make a major contribution to the successful exploitation of this opportunity."

Bart Biebuyck, executive director of the Fuel Cells and Hydrogen Joint Undertaking, stated: "European labs have delivered mature and high quality research solutions on hydrogen technologies, and these are now being transferred to the car industry in the manufacturing lines. This is a good signal for the decarbonisation of transport, for the economy in Europe and for the job creations in our industries."

App Cuvvas million miles

TODAY marks some important milestones for Cuvva, the hourly car insurance app.

1. Cuvva users have driven over 1 million miles whilst insured under the Cuvva app.

2. Cuvva is releasing a game changing V2 app dubbed 'The Social Garage' allowing users to see which of their Facebook friends have cars available to borrow directly in the app.

Cuvva was founded by Freddy Macnamara who grew up in rural Scotland where he was frequently stranded, with buses into town leaving only twice a day. He became frustrated that though family and friends had cars sitting idle, he couldn't use them.

In his words "we've turned a process that normally takes an hour, into a 10 second, on-demand service on your smartphone. What Uber have done for booking a taxi, we have now done for 'getting Cuvva'd'."

Version 2 creates a zero friction model, closes information symmetry, so friends who want to borrow cars know which of their friends have cars they are happy to lend in return for a cash contribution, and vice versa.

Leveraging the Facebook graph means people only lend their cars to trusted friends, and no one else.

SUPER SALOON: Goodwood display

Giulia Quadrifoglio is given its first outing

ALFA Romeo has been demonstrating the full power of the marque at the Goodwood Festival of Speed this week, with a debut for the all-new Alfa Romeo Giulia in the UK alongside some of the greatest racing vehicles in its illustrious history.

Those attending the event, which ends on Sunday, can be the first in the UK to see and hear the Alfa Romeo Giulia Quadrifoglio in action, when its advanced all-new, 510bhp, turbo-charged V6 is unleashed on the famous Goodwood hillclimb.

Also on display will be the rest of the Alfa Romeo range, including the new Alfa Romeo MiTo and new Alfa Romeo Giulietta, both of which now adopt the styling cues of the Alfa Romeo Giulia, include new 'Giulia inspired' honeycomb grilles, interior and exterior upgrades, new badging and new alloy wheel designs.

A snapshot of Alfa Romeo's legendary motorsport heritage and lineage will also be on display at the Festival, with an Alfa Romeo Giulia GTAm, Alfa Romeo 33/3 Le Mans Spider (static only), and an Alfa Romeo 33 TT 12.

AUDI: Debuts galore

Audi is on song at Goodwood Festival

NO fewer than nine brand new Audi models made their UK public debuts at this year's Goodwood Festival of Speed, collectively covering an intoxicating spectrum of speed, performance, trendsetting technology and masterly design.

The latest proponents of Vorsprung durch Technik will include the Q2 compact SUV charting new territory for Audi, the beautifully brawny new S5 Coupé, the ground-breaking new SQ7 TDI and the searing 400PS, sub-five-second TT RS Coupé. These rising stars will mingle with Audi masterstrokes of the past, including the Auto Union Type C Grand Prix car, the S1 quattro E2 Group B competition car and the Audi V8 DTM, which will be piloted by Pink Floyd legend Nick Mason, rally legend David Llewellyn and circuit racing star Frank Biela respectively.

So beautiful, Aston Martin's new Vanquish Zagato

ASTON Martin this week announces a limited series production of the exhilarating Vanquish Zagato Coupe; the latest creation from its long-standing partnership with the prestigious Italian design-house Zagato.

The Vanquish Zagato Concept was unveiled to great acclaim at the prestigious Concorso d'Eleganza Villa d'Este at Lake Como, Italy in May 2016. Thanks to unprecedented customer interest, a strictly limited production run of 99 cars will be built to order at Aston Martin's production facility in Gaydon, England.

Vanquish Zagato is the fifth car to emerge from a collaboration that stretches back over five decades, pairing Aston Martin's acclaimed dynamic and material qualities with Zagato's signature design language. As well as spectacular sporting ability, Vanquish Zagato showcases the very best of Aston Martin's bespoke luxury.

The collaboration with Zagato began with the beautifully muscular DB4 GT Zagato racing car of 1960 – now valued at over £10 million – and includes the V8 Vantage Zagato launched in 1986, the 2002 DB7 Vantage Zagato and the V12 Vantage Zagato revealed in 2011.

The Vanquish Zagato is a powerful addition to that portfolio; a GT car that blends Aston Martin's inherent refinement and capabilities with Zagato's characteristic design details, born out of racing and honed over many years of creating elegant luxury sports cars. Aston Martin's 6.0L V12 powertrain has been uprated to increase its output to 600PS1, capable of delivering a projected 0-60mph time of 3.5 seconds. This added performance matched to a unique suspension setup will create a unique GT driving experience specific to the Vanquish Zagato model.

Customer deliveries will begin in the first quarter of 2017.

Marshall Hyundai sets female-friendly agenda

MICHELLE Amabile, who has worked for Marshall for some years and in 2015 came runner-up as the best SEAT service manager of the year, has been promoted to Service Manager for SEAT & Hyundai. Meanwhile Emma Myall, who has worked at Cambridge Hyundai as Service Advisor for six years, has been promoted to Workshop Controller.

Emma said: "I am really happy for the opportunity given to me and can see both dealerships going from strength to strength. We are in a unique position in our industry where we have two women in these roles."

Michelle added: "Marshall Motor Group are #19 in the 'Great Place to Work' survey in the UK. Working with my team at Hyundai and Seat Cambridge it really is a wonderful place to work as the company puts customers and staff first. I have been given the opportunity to spread my wings here."

Both roles to which Emma and Michelle have been promoted are customarily dominated by men throughout the country, but the women will be given equal pay and conditions so that there is no gender gap in this case.

Zak Long, GM for both brands, said: "It gives me great pleasure in being able to assist in these ladies' careers, to support and coach them to reach their full potential. I believe in equal pay terms and conditions and that the right person for the role is promoted."

"With these two ladies working together, I am sure they will assist all our customers now and in the future and I would like to wish them every success."

Meanwhile the Hyundai brand has been achieving its targets and going from strength to strength, echoed in its sponsoring of Euro 2016 football tournament. Hopefully these management appointments will set a trend in the industry that will see many more women flourish within these roles.

The automotive industry has always been one traditionally dominated by men, from the showroom floor to the executive suites. Marshall Hyundai & SEAT Cambridge are bucking this trend though, with the announcement that they are promoting two female employees to management positions at these branches.

Marshall Hyundai & Seat are based at 699 Newmarket Road, Cambridge CB5 8SQ.

HAVERHILL SPORT

STREET-WISE: Haverhill driver Gary Paffett (2) in action at the Norisring in his Euronics Mercedes-AMG C63

Weekend to forget for Mercedes ace Paffett

GARY Paffett came away from the latest round of the DTM at the Norisring empty-handed after a 14th-place finish was followed by a retirement.

Difficulties in practice and qualifying meant he started the first of the two races in 16th position.

And although he was able to gain a couple of places, he was unable to make significant inroads.

The Haverhill driver said: "It's always tricky (at the Norisring), starting in the middle of the field. You get stuck in a train of vehicles, and it's very difficult to continue to move forwards."

Starting from 24th, the 2005 champion made a strong start but what appeared to be a power failure resulted in him having to retire.

"It was very disappointing," continued

Motorsport

Paffett. "After the pit stop, I was coming out of turn three when I noticed a loss of power."

"Although it improved, I was so far back that we decided not to risk the engine."

West Wrattling's Alexander Sims endured a weekend to forget in the Blancpain Endurance Cup at Circuit Paul Ricard, as he and his Rowe Racing team were forced into an early retirement.

He and co-drivers Philipp Eng and Steff Dusseldorp qualified their BMW M6 in 28th place.

But Eng, who took the first stint of the six-hour race, came into contact with a rival on the first lap and suffered extensive damage to the exhaust.

He continued for just over 10 more laps until it became clear retirement was the only option.

Westcott buoyant at Borough prospects

MARTIN Westcott is confident Haverhill Borough are in a strong position, despite the recent departures of some high-profile players.

Charlie Turner, Jonathan Milne, Harry Halls and Ryan Geoheghan have all made the switch to join former Borough boss Ben Cowling at Haverhill Rovers.

Player-manager Westcott is sad to see them go, but has some new signings lined up which he hopes to unveil next week and is in no doubt they will boost the squad already in place.

"There have been a few players leave, but most of last season's squad are staying," said Westcott.

"It's always going to be difficult because we're not paying players and they're young lads, so if they get offered some money then it's easy for them to get their heads turned.

"But we've got a good squad and the players we want to bring in are as good as, if not better than, the ones who have left."

Among those new signings is midfielder Errol Durrell, who returns to Borough after not playing last season.

Westcott is also pleased to have Rod Gaffan return as assistant manager.

"I worked with Rod when he was reserve team manager and a lot of the players know him as well," said Westcott.

"It's almost like having an extra player available because it means I don't have to worry about leaving the bench with no-one from the management team there if I'm playing, which was a bit of an issue last season."

The team returned to pre-season training last week and have their first friendly away to Cambridge City on July 9.

Trips to Walsham Le Willows, Hardwick, Chatteris Town and Mundford are on the cards as well, along with a game against Saffron Walden on the 3G pitch at Linton to help Borough prepare for life on their new artificial surface.

"It's difficult to arrange away friendlies at this time of the year, but all of the teams have been very accommodating," said Westcott.

"Last time I heard, they were ahead of schedule on the 3G pitch, so hopefully we can be on it by the end of August.

"We might have to play our first league games away, but hopefully we'll have fewer postponements this season."
